YOUR NEXT POOJA

For Parents:

If this was the wedding of the last of your children, a Tulsi Vivah is next. Prior to that – if more children yet to be married - Thanks Giving, Receiving Blessings & More

For Bride & Groom:

The First of either an Anniversary, A Major Purchase such as a House or wanting to start a family or just celebrating the New Era! Whichever happens to be the first.

WHY VIDHI

Vidhi is that part of a wedding ceremony that used to span over a fortnight in the days not so long ago. In some parts of India, even to this day, this ceremony has more importance than the actual wedding ceremony.

Over the years, in good times as well as in bad times, families stick together. These are the very people with whom you or a member of your close family may have at times a loving relationship or at other times a disagreement that seeks no boundaries. Despite all this, unlike an employment situation wherein once left, cannot go back, families get back together to assist each other.

Well, wedding is a good time to enjoy. Unfortunately life as it is; is tending to have more downs than ups. So, at joyous times like this, we invite all the close relatives and friends who have been the backbone to our up-bringing. We ask them to partake in our celebrations. This is a special thank you for all them ahead of the main function.

To some, the invite is extended to even join-in in the ceremony. The actual ceremony, may it be just an excuse, also has many reasons. From Ganesh Poojan through to Varadh and even the sending off for the Groom being an additional ceremony has a special reason. All these will soon be made available in print. Meanwhile, my Blessings and Best Wishes not only to the Bride or the Groom but also to all involved therein. Especially to those who have given their time and effort to make this event a memorable one in more way than one.
